MANAGER COMMENTARY

The Evenlode Global Equity Fund rose in April, materially ahead of its comparator benchmark, the MSCI World Index. We believe the primary driver for this was a strong preference for 'quality' in a disordered stock market – since the beginning of March, the MSCI World Index is up 1% but the MSCI World Quality Index is up 5% (source: FE, Total Return, GBP terms). The Fund is somewhat ahead of the MSCI World Quality Index in the same period.

During April the team were busy with the seasonal ritual of first-quarter earnings reports, an important rite in the fund manager's liturgical calendar. While the season is still underway, we have been struck so far by the continued smooth delivery of organic revenue growth and margin protection by the broad universe of listed companies. This is against a backdrop of continuing high inflation in developed markets, broadly running ahead of wage growth, and a rapid rates cycle, particularly in the US. There are legitimate questions out there about the durability of consumer purchasing power and equity market strength given the major inversion of the yield curve and the decelerating credit impulse in the US.

In these times, we go back to the fundamentals which Evenlode was built on to check our alignment with these tenets. We have deliberately built a portfolio over years which is concentrated in companies whose costs are disproportionately fixed and which are essential cogs in non-discretionary everyday processes. These characteristics drive recurring, relatively small-ticket revenues, and attractive margins and returns on capital. A company like Verisk is a typical example, critical to the unglamorous task of underwriting new property and casualty insurance policies and assessing claims in the US, a business line which held up well in 2008-2009. Companies with variable cost bases we like sell everyday low-ticket items, for instance Nestlé and Heineken. Those which sell larger-ticket items have extraordinary pricing power based on tight control of inventory and the channel, such as LVMH and Hermès.

In short, we have a portfolio that is designed to protect and grow capital in a wide range of scenarios. We cannot say how the rest of 2023 will play out, but we know that whatever the weather, our portfolio companies will continue to invest in their businesses to make their products better for their customers. For ourselves, we will continue to look out for new investment ideas and continue our research on our existing investment universe.

As ever, we would like to thank all our investors for their trust and backing, and we continue to focus our efforts on preserving and growing your capital.

ENVIRONMENTAL, SOCIAL AND GOVERNANCE (ESG)

Integration into the investment process

We believe that being an active owner and engaging with investee companies is not only a responsible approach to investment management, but also a highly effective way to generate long-term returns for minority shareholders. By actively engaging with the management of investee companies, we can gain a deeper understanding of their climate strategy, material risks within their supply chain and management culture, and identify potential risks and opportunities that might not be immediately apparent. Moreover, by advocating for good corporate governance practices and encouraging companies to prioritise shareholder interests, we can help to ensure that our investments are managed in a responsible and sustainable manner. This can lead to improved transparency, greater accountability, and better alignment of interests between management and shareholders, all of which can help to enhance shareholder value over the long term.
