MANAGER COMMENTARY

Despite falling in absolute terms, Evenlode Global Equity slightly outperformed both the comparator benchmark, the MSCI World Index, and the peer group, IA Global, in August. The last month also saw the completion of half-year reporting for the portfolio companies. The overall picture has been encouraging with the average organic revenue growth close to 9% and margins broadly flat. This is a good outcome in a tricky economic environment, with increasing rates, persistently elevated raw material costs, and high wage inflation. From these results, the pricing power of the companies in the fund remains unimpaired. There have been a few notable laggards, with CH Robinson experiencing a cyclical downturn in US shipping rates, and the spirits manufacturers, Diageo and Pernod Ricard, seeing soft spirits sales into the channel in the US as it works through surplus inventory. However, these negatives have been outweighed by continued growth in the rest of the portfolio, most notably Amazon and Nintendo, which continue to benefit from robust consumer spending despite economic uncertainty. Our focus remains on the long-term investment outlook and ensuring that all portfolio companies are adequately investing to grow in a wide range of market conditions.

During August we exited the fund's small position in Estée Lauder, the US cosmetics company. Estée Lauder has been a drag on fund performance over the past year, as the post-pandemic recovery of the travel retail business has faltered. While Estée's brand portfolio remains highly attractive, we are concerned that the company has been underinvested versus peers. The most recent results featured margin targets which we worry are in tension with the long-term health of the brand portfolio. As a result, we have downgraded our growth estimates for the company and now believe that Estée Lauder are no longer offering a large enough implied return for the risks that the company faces. As such, we believe it is prudent to reinvest our co-investors' capital elsewhere in the portfolio.

Integration into the investment process

SAWAN KUMAR
Head of Stewardship

We actively engage with portfolio companies to drive their progress towards achieving net-zero emissions, recognising that this is where our influence can make the most significant contribution to decarbonising the economy. Engagement is a fundamental aspect of our stewardship strategy, which we believe adds value for both parties involved. It helps us gain a deeper understanding of their business context and their efforts to mitigate and build resilience against the perceived risks. While our goal is to create long-term value for our clients by enhancing the sustainability profile of these companies, we acknowledge that this transformation takes time and a measured approach. To ensure the effectiveness of our engagements, we set specific objectives for each interaction, allowing us to monitor progress and gather important data to improve our engagement methods over time.
