MANAGER COMMENTARY

In January, WS Evenlode Global Equity outperformed its comparator benchmark, the MSCI World Index. The outperformance for the month was exaggerated by the fund's 12 noon valuation point. The MSCI World Index fell in the afternoon of 31 January on the back of the Federal Reserve's decision to wait for more conclusive inflation data before considering rate cuts, but even adjusting for this the fund was ahead of the index.

Most companies are now reporting their 2023 annual results and so far, the portfolio is acquitting itself well. Mastercard, the fund's largest holding, was the top performer this month, with results that indicate consumer spending remains resilient. The three major cloud vendors - Alphabet (Google GCP), Microsoft (Azure), and Amazon (AWS) - showed sequential performance improvements with encouraging commentary for the broader tech ecosystem. Microsoft was the second-largest contributor to performance in January, as Azure continues to benefit from its significant enterprise client base. Diageo's results for the half-year ended December 2023 were taken as green shoots after a cycle of inventory adjustment.

At the beginning of the year, we sold our small remaining position in Unilever as, while still attractive, we have better pure capital compounding opportunities elsewhere in our investable universe. We initiated small positions in Informa, the leading global business-to-business event organiser, and Airbnb, a leader in the online marketplace for holiday rentals. Both businesses benefit from robust two-sided networks and have seen growing demand for their services following the pandemic. We think they both offer attractive cash flow compounding and are positioned well for long-term capital appreciation potential.

At Evenlode, we recognise that climate change poses significant financial challenges and opportunities, in the near term and the future. To protect and enhance the value of our clients' assets, it is important for us to identify and evaluate the climate-related risks and opportunities that the companies in our investment portfolios and investible universe face, as well as the ways in which they are preparing themselves for the transition to a low-carbon economy. We rely on accurate and timely climate-related financial disclosures by companies. We hope that improved disclosures of climate-related risks and opportunities will not only help companies consider the effects of climate change in their business decisions, but also better demonstrate responsibility in their management of climate impacts.
