MANAGER COMMENTARY

The Evenlode Global Equity Fund declined in May materially more than its comparator benchmark, the MSCI World Index. We had been pleasantly surprised by the Fund's outperformance in the first four months of the year, given our zero weight in the energy and materials sectors, but unfortunately this proved too good to last. While this weighting may be an impediment in the current market environment, we remain focused on companies and sectors with differentiated competitive assets that confer durable pricing power. Energy and materials are both fairly pure commodities and as such are not consistent with our investment approach.

Performance in the month on an absolute level was driven by two factors. One was a partial reversal of earlier outperformance by some (mainly European) portfolio companies, after a period where technology companies led declines. This second bucket is distinctly not tech, but its components enjoy both enviable current economics and good long-term cashflow visibility: Nestlé, Wolters Kluwer, RELX, Pernod Ricard, Diageo, Hermès, and Experian were all major negative contributors. Of them, only Experian reported results in the month, and these were robust.

The other factor was idiosyncratic issues at two portfolio companies, Verisk and Intercontinental Exchange (ICE). Verisk is in the middle of a self-simplification process which is expected to end in the disposal of all its non-insurance assets after an unsatisfactory foray into non-core activities. Its first quarter results call was poorly received by the market, and we expect new management will have to up their game in laying out their plan for the newly focused assets in future investor communications. The core insurance claims data asset remains powerful and recent conversations strengthened our view that there is probably untapped earnings power in the data set. ICE announced they were purchasing the dominant US mortgage servicing platform, Black Knight, just as the US mortgage market digests the impact of a massive hike in the critical 30-year fixed mortgage rate. While there is a 'show me' aspect to the deal and the logic behind it, ICE do have a proven record of consolidating and digitising complicated financial 'plumbing' transactions, and the US mortgage market is enormous even relative to ICE's existing derivatives franchises.

Our conviction remains bone deep that over the long term share prices are ultimately a function of corporate cashflows. We spent eight days in the US in May meeting management teams at 48 companies, both in the portfolio and prospective investments. If we could identify a collective thread, it was that they were focused on matters which lay in their control, most of all their ability to reinvest in their competitive advantage to improve the value they deliver to customers. We expect our portfolio to continue to deliver organic revenue and cashflow growth which is both faster and more durable than the broader market, regardless of the marginal buyer's appetite for equities.

Once again, we would like to thank all our investors for their trust and backing, and we continue to focus our efforts on preserving and growing your capital.

Integration into the investment process

Every year, Evenlode assesses the financed emissions embedded in its investments, to better understand the impact our investee companies have on the climate, and the risk they face from regulation and consumer pressure on climate transition. Our annual Portfolio Emissions Report 2022 states that the emissions associated with investing £10k in one of our funds is between 0.6 and 2.4 tonnes of CO₂-equivalents or between 25 and 56 kilograms for scope 1 and 2 alone. This is many times lower than the emissions associated with an equivalent £10k investment in a fund tracking the MSCI World Index or the FTSE All Share Index, Evenlode funds' formal comparator benchmarks (this is for scope 1 and 2; Scope 3 estimates are still not widely reported for funds and indices). For more information, please visit our website for the full emissions analysis plus our latest annual Responsible Investment Report 2021.
