MANAGER COMMENTARY

July witnessed a rebound in global equity markets, countering the weakness witnessed in previous months. The benchmark MSCI World Index was up +7.9% in dollar terms over the month but remains down by -14.2% in dollars for the year to the end of July 2022. For investors in other currencies the picture looks more benign as the dollar has been very strong; the index is down -4.5% in sterling and -4.3% in euros over the same time period. The fund is down -4.2% year to date in sterling, so slightly ahead of the benchmark but behind the IA Global Equity Income sector's return of -2.4%. Funds in the sector typically have exposure to energy and financial companies for their dividend yields. These sectors have performed very well this year but are industries where we find few companies that fit with the Evenlode investment process.

We are in the middle of the half-year reporting season and just over half of the portfolio has provided a financial update. Operationally, inflation is a common topic and in some cases supply chain constraints are impacting operations. Revenue growth has been strong and profit margins have expanded overall. However, consumer goods companies are seeing the most acute input cost inflation, leading to gross and operating margin declines, being offset somewhat by significant price increases to consumers. More generally, companies are using some of their cash flow to invest in working capital to secure supply. Some businesses, such as Nestlé, are increasing capital expenditure to satisfy demand. This means that free cash flow has declined compared to last year. The companies in the portfolio generate ample cash flow, meaning that when such periods occur there is scope for them to flexibly invest for the long term, and it is encouraging that this is happening in practice.

Integration into the investment process

We use active engagement to move portfolio companies along their net zero journey. This is where we can have the biggest impact and can contribute to real decarbonisation in the economy.
