MANAGER COMMENTARY

The Evenlode Global Income portfolio remained largely unchanged during June, except for the completion of Informa's takeover of UBM. Under the terms of the deal the fund received some cash and some Informa shares, which have been retained in the fund. Informa is a diversified media company covering academic publishing through its Taylor & Francis division, business information across a range of sectors from finance to pharmaceuticals, and exhibitions, where it is now the market leader following the UBM transaction. With digital being the primary mode of delivery in publishing and business information, exhibitions offers attractive economics in the world of face-to-face interactions, which are increasingly scarce and highly valued in the on-line age. Events are organised across many industries through the year and around the world, from World of Concrete in Las Vegas to China Beauty Expo in Shanghai. Informa forms part of the business-to-business media exposure in the portfolio, which also includes Thomson Reuters, Wolters Kluwer and Relx, totalling around 12% of Evenlode Global Income. Additionally the fund has a position in consumer media through Disney, which is engaged in a tussle with Comcast over the purchase of the studio assets of 21st Century Fox. Disney aims to create a content powerhouse that can independently operate in the new era of on-demand TV, film and audio. Strategically this makes sense, although we are keeping a keen eye on the value paid to ensure that the prospect for shareholder returns remains good. We are watching this real-life drama with interest.

What are the Risks?

As a concentrated equity portfolio of typically less than 40 investments, the fund can involve higher risk and higher volatility. The value of an investment and the income from it can fall as well as rise as a result of market and currency movement; you may not get back the amount originally invested. You should therefore regard your investment as medium-to-long term. Details on the risk factors are included in the fund's prospectus, available on our website.
