MANAGER COMMENTARY

The month of October was marked by a return to volatility in equity markets. It was also the scene of the third quarter reporting season, and the contribution to the fund's performance of our investee companies broadly reflected the short term performance being enjoyed or otherwise. On the positive side were consumer goods companies P&G and PepsiCo. P&G in particular outperformed the market's modest expectations, particularly around market share growth and the recently underperforming male grooming division (consisting of the Gillette brand). Other consumer goods companies like Nestle were also seeing organic growth driven by increasing volumes. Chipmaker Intel posted very strong results, as did Microsoft in the software part of the IT sector, although the share price reaction was negative. Also on the negative side performance-wise were companies where there are specific challenges. Advertiser WPP had rather weak results, and IBM announced the acquisition of Red Hat, purveyor of the Linux operating system which was taken badly by the market. A theme across these very different companies is debt, and our maximum position sizing framework had led us to limit exposure in response to elevated levels of leverage. ABInbev is another case in point, as the beer company halved its dividend in order to reduce the debt taken on as part of its acquisition of SAB Miller. Whilst a cut in a dividend generally runs counter to our aim of consistently growing distributions, in this case we believe that the underlying business is sound and are supportive of moves that strengthen the balance sheet.

What are the Risks?

As a concentrated equity portfolio of typically less than 40 investments, the fund can involve higher risk and higher volatility. The value of an investment and the income from it can fall as well as rise as a result of market and currency movement; you may not get back the amount originally invested. You should therefore regard your investment as medium-to-long term. Details on the risk factors are included in the fund's prospectus, available on our website.
