MANAGER COMMENTARY

January saw a recovery in equity markets after a volatile 2022 and the fund saw positive returns, albeit behind the market. There are various dimensions for investors in companies to look through as we progress through 2023. The current corporate results season will be a barometer, when a majority of companies will tell us how 2022 was for them and how they are expecting 2023 to go. Watchers of the macro economy will be keenly observing interest rates - these have risen from historic lows in the last year but still sit a long way behind the prevailing rate of inflation. Geopolitical happenings will continue to be a factor of course. We are, sadly, on the cusp of the first anniversary of Vladimir Putin's invasion of Ukraine with its significant human cost and the impact on commodities markets, notably energy.

Within the portfolio we made one change, exiting the fund's small position in online marketplace eBay. When we first invested in November 2019 we said "Our view is that eBay is in a strong position within its now-mature niche, and will grow albeit not as quickly as some in the ecommerce world". The growth has turned out to be the case, particularly helped along by covid, but we have conducted a review of online marketplaces and perceive risks that could see that growth stagnate or turn negative. Amongst these is the improved offering from other retailers and online platforms. On one side there are marketplaces that are more niche, focusing on a narrow category of products and attracting enthusiasts; on the other side sit traditional retailers where the value and online offerings are now much more compelling than they used to be. Whilst these threats may be managed, we will watch from the sidelines having had eBay provide a reasonably positive contribution to the fund's return during the time held.

Integration into the investment process

A fresh start to a new year, however the goal for the Stewardship team remains the same. We aim to preserve and enhance the value of our clients' assets through long-term engagement and analysis. How does this work in practice? As proud members of the Net Zero Asset Managers (NZAM) initiative, we use active voting and engage with companies in our funds over the long-term to move them along their net zero journey. This is where we can have the biggest impact and can contribute to real economic change and decarbonisation. Assessing these companies on their net zero plans is the team's primary focus and we look forward to providing you with more detail on how our investee companies and our portfolios have progressed in the coming months.
