MANAGER COMMENTARY

November was a positive month for equities overall, although there was some volatility right at the end as Thanksgiving was followed by surprisingly strong US jobs data. This data came out after the month end, but the resulting negative market reaction shows that macroeconomic factors, particularly the future path of interest rates, are continuing to be a focus for equity investors. On the ground, we continued to receive results updates from companies, with longer- and shorter-term trends being visible. Near-term, 'fast moving' consumer goods companies such as Nestlé, PepsiCo and Unilever are witnessing some changing consumer behaviour in response to price increases and reduced consumer confidence, although this is relatively muted so far. At the opposite end of consumer spending, luxury goods giant LVMH saw its sales progress strongly despite lockdowns continuing in China, a key market. The recent news of the Chinese government considering the relaxing of covid testing requirements is an interesting development politically and will be welcomed by businesses who sell into the country. There are some signs of supply chain challenges easing, and commodities prices falling, which will also be welcome by many businesses. Transportation broker CH Robinson reported logistics costs falling rapidly. Soft commodities prices also reduced, and the price of oil has declined, which will feed through to corporate cash flow and profitability in time, as many businesses buy their inputs ahead of time. We didn't make any major changes to the portfolio during the month, with valuations looking relatively comfortable. Given the market volatility in recent years the pace of change in the portfolio has been elevated as we have sought to manage valuation risk and opportunity. This has started to abate over the last couple of months.

Integration into the investment process

We independently analyse and vote on all resolutions at every AGM of an investee company. The voting of resolutions followed by active engagement is the formal mechanism by which we believe we can effect change and express opinion on corporate matters. In some cases we vote against the recommendations of management where there is a considered reason for doing so, for example if remuneration policies did not assess management on managing climate-related risks and/or reduction of greenhouse gas emissions in their operations or supply chain. When we do vote against a management recommendation, we write to the company explaining why and build the conversation into an engagement plan, as appropriate.

Our ongoing commitment

Signatory of:

Evenlode Investment Management became a signatory to the United Nations Principles for Responsible Investment (UNPRI) in 2018. By becoming signatories, we commit to implementing these principles and incorporating environmental, social and governance factors into our investment process to help enhance returns and better manage risk for our clients.
