MANAGER COMMENTARY

Mid-July marked the beginning of the Q2 earnings season. Within two weeks, over 80% of portfolio companies published results, with average organic revenue growth running around 10% year-to-year and operating profit growth at c.11% on the same measure. These results reassuringly underscore the financial resilience of our portfolio companies. In general, increased pricing has offset slowdown in volumes growth, while the pace of operating expenses growth is decelerating.

In July, Evenlode Global Opportunities somewhat underperformed its comparator benchmark, the MSCI World Index. Heineken was the largest performance detractor due to weak volumes and profit declines in emerging markets, on a mix of macroeconomic volatility and execution problems. We do not believe the long-term investment case has been damaged and are reassured to see management continue to increase investment. Similarly, S&P Global's share price underperformed on political and regulatory challenges impacting sales of ESG and sustainability data, leading to a slight downward adjustment to full-year guidance. We've added to both names in light of this weakness and our continued confidence in their long-term competitive advantages. Our lack of exposure to some cyclical sectors (eg. Energy and Banks) further contributed to our lag vs. the benchmark.

The best performer this month was Alphabet. The company reported accelerating revenue growth in search and advertisement, countering concerns of a potential slowdown in the ad market. Competition from Microsoft's generative AI search engine has not visibly impacted Alphabet's results. The Google Cloud business continues to grow operating profits as enterprises transition their technology to public cloud.

On 15 July 2023, the Evenlode Global Equity strategy celebrated its 3-year anniversary. Over this period, TB Evenlode Global Equity has outperformed both its comparator benchmark, the MSCI World Index, and the IA Global peer group. In September we will publish an investment view that analyses this performance. We are pleased with the relative performance and believe the portfolio is well-positioned for future success but remain mindful that equity investment is a long-term pursuit. We appreciate our investors' trust and partnership on this journey.

Integration into the investment process

Over the last 12-18 months, we have been redefining our stewardship strategy which has led to further evolution of our purpose statement. Our objective as a team is to preserve and enhance the value of our clients' assets through long-term engagement and analysis, and we will continue to employ careful thought, stewardship, and expertise in our investment approach focusing on consistent long-term performance. However, we have now explicitly emphasised the importance of both preserving and enhancing value, which we believe can be achieved through the lens of managing long-term risk through engagement and rigorous ESG analysis. Engaging with companies directly addresses the 'enhancing value' component of this process. To address the 'preserving value' element, we meticulously consider environmental, social, and governance (ESG) factors as potential risks within our investment and risk management frameworks. Although we use the term ESG to distinguish these factors from other investment considerations, we firmly believe that they form an integral part of a comprehensive investment case for any business.

Our ongoing commitment

Evenlode Investment Management became a signatory to the United Nations Principles for Responsible Investment (UNPRI) in 2018.
