MANAGER COMMENTARY

The Evenlode Global Opportunities Fund returned 1.86% in September, modestly ahead of its comparator benchmark the MSCI World Index which returned 1.83% (USD terms). The market continues to broaden having started a slow but steady ‘rotation’ in mid-July, albeit punctuated by abrupt bouts of brutal volatility.

We think the market is now in a slightly peculiar position, summed up by the ancient market adage ‘it is better to travel than to arrive’. Having flown since the end of October 2023 on a cocktail of expected rate cuts and surging AI capex, we have now arrived at an (interim) end station, raising the question of what will drive markets from here. The AI capex has arrived in full force but so far without material revenue benefits; when we look at major players in the industry, consensus revenue estimates have increased quite modestly since the start of the year, but capex estimates are up sharply^[1]. Meanwhile market expectations for the pace and scale of US rate cuts have been extremely volatile. Taken together, we think these two factors partly explain the much less directional markets seen during the third quarter of 2024.

While we had no entries or exits during the quarter, we continue to manage position sizing and risk carefully. The rotation during the month led to us trimming a number of positions we had sized up during periods of share price weakness earlier in the year, including Medtronic, Amadeus, Experian, and Mastercard. In all these cases, we remain firmly committed holders of the name, but share price strength had pushed the holding in the fund above our self-imposed position risk size limits, which we use to limit portfolio exposure to idiosyncratic company-specific risks. While broad equity valuations remain high in our view, there are still pockets of opportunity and we have been modestly sizing up some positions in the portfolio, particularly in high quality consumer names where fundamentals continue to diverge from share price performance.

^[1] We have written more on AI capex, and how it relates to our proprietary valuation system, in our third quarter investment view.

ENVIRONMENTAL, SOCIAL AND GOVERNANCE (ESG)

We believe that delivering real, durable returns over the long term can be best achieved by integrating environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into our risk management framework as this ensures that all long-term risks are monitored and managed on an ongoing basis. In addition to reviewing ESG factors when making investment decisions, we engage with portfolio companies on a range of ESG issues (for example greenhouse gas emission reduction). However, please note that the fund does not have a sustainability objective.

SAWAN WADHWA
Head of Stewardship

Integration into the investment process

The Evenlode board states explicitly that it is committed to considering the risks and opportunities associated with environmental, social and governance (ESG) matters when setting the firm's risk appetite and charging executives with developing and approving the business plans. As a business, the biggest risk that we face is in not managing the risks and opportunities in client portfolios appropriately; unmanaged risks could translate into lower or negative returns for clients. Environmental risks, of which climate change is one element, fall firmly into the category of risks to be managed at a company and portfolio level.
